

- Visit and share the website UCAIR.org where the public can learn about small behavior changes for better air. The Utah Clean Air Partnership will run a statewide public education campaign this inversion season, beginning December 1st. Join the cause and consider sharing social media posts about air quality using the hashtag #ShowUCAIR.
- Visit the Utah Department of Environmental Quality Wood Burning Program pages to learn about the impacts of wood burning and to access the DEQ's Inversion Toolkit.
- Hear the private sector's perspective on air quality by attending the Salt Lake Chamber Business Case for Clean Air Summit on Dec. 4, or listen to panel discussions posted to their website after the event. Also, join the Chamber-lead Inversion Mitigation Initiative, which will be detailed at the Summit.
- Visit the TravelWise website for a variety of resources designed to reduce single-occupant vehicle trips, including a Community Resource Kit especially for local governments.
- Try transit. It's never been easier to get out of your car and ride transit along the Wasatch Front, and there are many resources available to help plan your trip. Visit the RideUTA website, call 1-800-RIDE-UTA, or utilize any of the great third-party transit apps. Paying your fare is simple with UTA's FAREPAY card. In addition, there are several bulk pass discount programs available that can be tailored to your office location. This makes it even more attractive to leave your car keys at the door. For transit trips outside of the Wasatch Front, check out UCAIR's Public Transit page to give it a try!
- Consider ways to reduce idling in public places and amongst your employees. Learn more at Utah Clean Cities' Idle Free Utah page.
- Prepare an Emergency Air Quality Implementation Action Plan with help from Breathe Utah, or contact Breathe Utah to deliver a fun, interactive and informative "Air Aware" presentation for your school, workplace or community group.